Traditional Chinese edition of a Japanese children's picture book. Early in the morning, Fox the bread maker and his assistant Little Mouse begin their daily bread-making routine. When bread has been baked, it's time for their customers to choose their favorites. Readers can see Fox and Mouse singing happily while kneading and shaping dough into many fun shapes, with mouthwatering aroma filling the air. The recipes are in the appendix, the reader can share the same joy with Fox, Mouse and their customers. In Traditional Chinese. Annotation copyright Tsai Fong Books, Inc.

This is a lovely good night picture book. The overall presenting atmosphere has mastered the setting of children as the main reading objects. It uses repetitive logic and rhythm. The text and images echo the stacking, honest, and childlike. Elephants, horses, giraffes, and birds came and knocked on the door one by one to borrow a bed from the little boy Adi. In addition to lending them the bed, Adi also used the way his parents coax him to sleep to comfort these animal friends who wanted to sleep but

By his second wife, Elizabeth Allen, whom he married in 1767, Dr. Burney had two children--a son, Richard Thomas, and a daughter, Sarah Harriet. The latter followed the career of her famous half-sister, and acquired some distinction as a novelist. Cousins Richard and Edward were younger sons of Uncle Richard Burney, of Worcester. Edward was successful as an artist, especially as a book-illustrator. He painted the portrait of Fanny Burney, a reproduction of which forms the frontispiece to the present volume. Some of his work may be seen in the South Kensington Museum. Chesington, where we shall presently find Fanny on a visit to Mr. Crisp, was an old roomy mansion, standing in the midst of a lonely common in Surrey, between Kingston and Epsom. It had belonged to Mr. Crisp's friend, Christopher Hamilton, and on his death became the property of his unmarried sister, Mrs. Sarah Hamilton, who, being in poor circumstances, let part of the house to a farmer, and took boarders. Of the latter, Mr. Crisp was the most constant, boarding at Chesington for nearly twenty years, and dying there in 1783. Kitty Cooke, whose name occurs in the "Diary," was the niece of Mrs. Hamilton, and resided with her at Chesington. Mrs. Sophia Gast, whom we find a
