I started writing poems in 1983 when Nana died. The words seem to flow from pen to paper without realizing what I was doing. Over the years I have written poems to family, friends and work colleagues for special occasions or events in their lives. The people I have written a poem for all have a special place in my heart. I find it hard to show my feelings face to face and express myself and poetry is the best way I have found to say what I truly feel.

A timeless collection of poems and thoughts to tease your heart and make it ready for love. In Times of Love is replete with poems and thoughts that translate your own thoughts of love. Times have changed and maybe the expression of love too. But here is the catch. These poems will make you want to become a poetry blacksmith who creates riffs and turns that melt the heart of your love and spice up your date or your relationship. If you are in doubt, do yourself a favor and grab a copy. I am sure you won't put the book down until you reach the last page.

This book will inspire you to fall in love, fall out of love, and find love again. The passion of the words literally jumps off the pages as you read this play on words and long for love in your life. Bonus inspired poetry that will blow you away.

Drifting down in the clear calm weather, O, how sweet is the maiden's song! Love, my Love, when we drift together, O, how quickly we drift along. J. Ashby-sterry. LOVE AND I. Love came to me in the morning--A merry young imp was he; I knew when I saw him alighting, He wanted to stay with me. He folded his tiny wings and smiled, And then to my side drew nigh; But I wanted him not, so I told him to go, And Love flew away with a sigh. Love came to me in the noon-tide--Once more he was bright and gay; But I pushed him rudely from me, And told him to keep away. A SONG OF HEARTS. 109 A shadow came over his sunny face, As he lingered a moment near--Not a pang of regret or remorse felt I As Love flew off with a tear. Love came to me in the evening--He came in the twilight grey; And, oh! I was glad to see him, I wanted him then to stay. I poured out a goblet of sparkling wine, That we together might quaff. "Oh, stay with me now) sweet Love!" I cried, But Love flew off with a laugh. W. J. Cbosbie. A SONG OF HEARTS. When stars come forth in darkening skies, Love dreameth in thy wistful eyes--Oh! would I could young Love surprise When in those limpid orbs he sleeps, And modesty such close watch keeps Lest he should sudden wake and rise! Then would I bid the rogue confess That he has made thee long to bless Some heart that could thine own address In language only known to hearts--Or, better, through their subtle arts--And of him claim for thee redress. Because that when he knows full well My passion for thee, he'll not tell; But lets thee yearn and still rebel Against grim fate--what sayest thou, That "men are dull, or that ere now For thee had...

Essentially, this is Clive James' desert island poems: a selection of his favourite verse and a personal commentary on each. The Fire of Joy was the final book Clive James completed before his death in 2019. It takes its title from the French expression Feu de Joie, which refers to a military celebration when all the riflemen of a regiment fire one shot after another in a wave of continuous sound: it is a reminder that the regiment's collective power relies on the individual, and vice versa. In this book, James has chosen a succession of English poems, exploding in sequence from Chaucer to the present day; they tell the story of someone writing something wonderful, and someone else coming along, reading it, and feeling impelled to write something even more wonderful. After a lifetime, these are the poems James found so good that he remembered them despite himself. In offering them to you, the main purpose of this book is to provide ammunition that will satisfy your urge to discover, learn and declaim verse. As well as his selection of poems, James offers a commentary on each: whether this is a biographical, historical or critical introduction to the poem, or a more personal anecdote about the role a particular poem has played in James's life, these mini essays provide the joy of James's enthusiasm and the benefit of his knowledge. Full of the flashing fires of poems you will not be able to forget, this book will ignite your passion and leave you with a contagious crackle rattling in your ears.

I started writing just for fun one after another, but never realized that it would develop in me to be rather part of me. A few years later, I decided to be more serious about expressing my voice through my words. My first few poems were written about the view of women in our lives. As I was always a strong advocate for women, I started to express my affection toward them in every aspect I could think off, especially love at intimacy, their hard work, my mother, and so on. I wrote my first serious poem back in POETRY TEXTS & ANTHOLOGIES. This work features a vibrant selection of the best Scottish love poems, with each poet limited to one poem with the exception of Burns himself, that spans centuries and feelings of affection and desire. Through these poems many different kinds of love are explored whether it is sexual, passionate, romantic, or parental. In "100 Favourite Scottish Love Poems" traditional Scottish verse mixes with great literature. Poems of first love, yearning for love, love in absence and eternal love are not grouped thematically, as in so many other anthologies, but seamlessly so that contrasting poems can strike sparks off one another.

Self Love: A Revolution of the Heart is a book dedicated to helping you reflect on your life and how you can learn to love yourself more. We start off looking at examples of poetry that test the heart and end with an emotional high of understanding of increased self-confidence. These poems are guides to being dangerously authentic with yourself. Write your own words of wisdom to guide yourself. If it does not come to your right away, recite my poems to help you heal. You are the person that will need to step up in your life and dare to love you the way you deserve to love.

Springtime Heart is a collection of poems written over more than forty years, chronicling one woman's life through her observations on love and relationships, family and home and the natural world. Growing up in rural Ontario, Myrna Broadley dreamed of living near the water, with a view of the waves and the sky. The girl became a woman, wife and mother, and realized her dream. On Georgian Bay she found that spot of personal paradise. She marveled at the sights and sounds of the changing seasons; the fl uttering of wings at her birdfeeder; and the rainbow of colours shed planted in her gardens. Amid it all, she experienced the joys and trials that came with raising a family. To this day she still lives in her beloved country home on the shores of Georgian Bay, and watches the sun rise over the water every morning.

For Haruko Little moves on sight blinded by histories as trivial or expansive as the rain seducing light into a blurred excitement Then she opens all of one eye as accurate as longing as two hands beholden to the hunger of green leaves and rinsing them back into regular breath she who sees she frees each of these beggarly events cleansing them of dust and other death Poem about Process And Progress For Haruko Hey Baby you betta hurry it up! Because since you went totally off I seen a full moon I seen a half moon I seen a quarter moon I seen no moon whatsoever! I seen a equinox I seen a solstice I seen Mars and Venus on a line I seen a mess a fickle stars and lately I seen this new kind a luva on an' off the telephone who like to talk to me all the time real nice Resolution # 1,003 I will love who loves me I will love as much as I am loved I will hate who hates me I will feel nothing for everyone oblivious to me I will stay indifferent to indifference I will live hostile to hostility I will make myself a passionate and eager lover In response to passionate and eager love I will be nobody's fool Foreword WHAT IS THIS thing called love, in the poems of June Jordan, artist, teacher, social critic, visionary of human solidarity? First of all, it's a motive; the power Che Guevara was trying to invoke in his much-quoted assertion: "At the risk of appearing ridiculous . . . the true revolutionary is moved by great feelings of love." I think also of Paul Nizan: "You think you are innocent if you say, 'I love this woman and I want to act in accordance with my love,' but you are beginning the revolution. . . . You will be driven back: to claim the right to a human act is to attack the forces responsible for all the misery in the world." Neither of them, admittedly, was claiming the love of a woman for women, the love of a man for men, as revolutionary, as a human act. But the motive is "directed by desire" in Jordan

Lesson planning in line with the new Primary National Curriculum! Why do we teach children to read? It is not merely to decode the words. We teach them to derive meaning from the text, to comprehend it. To not just read the lines, but to read between the lines and even read beyond

The Equal Heart and Mind is an intimate portrait of poet Judith Wright and philosopher Jack McKinney. Set in Brisbane and at Mt Tamborine, where they lived for almost twenty years, these letters vividly recreate their intertwined lives and also paint an unforgettable picture of postwar Brisbane with its lively cabals of writers, artists and intellectuals. For decades, Judith Wright kept secret this cache of letters, giving them late in life to her daughter Meredith McKinney. Meredith and Patricia Clarke have edited the letters, interspersing them with poems, a selection of family album photographs and facsimiles of some of the handwritten and typescript letters. Meredith also contributes a special memoir of her parents, and the book concludes with Judith's moving account of Jack's death in 1966. These letters, poems and commentaries - along with the illustrations - together make an exquisite addition to the field of Australian literary biography.

These poems explore illness, sickness and health, past and present, in a dynamic and original way. They examine not only the sick body but the sick mind and sick society, racism and prejudice. It is Jackie Kay's third collection.'

Hats Off to the Sun celebrates the mysteries of daily life with poems of well-being, poems of love, poems of praise and poems of prayer. Polished and multi-faceted, the poems sparkle with the joy of existence.

The editors of "The Hell with Love" are back, applying their irreverent view of life and love to help melt the hardest heart. For anyone who's been let down by life and love, these poems reveal that the most important person one can fall in love with is oneself. The editors of The Hell With Love are back, applying their irreverent view of life and love to help melt the hardest heart of all—your own. About the Book Today, with so many forms and styles of modern poetry, it is refreshing sometimes to read the simple rhymes that one can understand without some kind of degree in reading poetry. The poems between the covers of this book come from the very heart of the writer and describes so many feelings she has felt through the many years of her life. Some are sad and some are hopeful and there are others that tell her story in rhyme that is simple and are written for ordinary people who often feel as she feels. Maybe in some of the poems they can find a part of themselves or relive some memories they have long forgotten but would like to revisit. May these words bring some joy to others and that is one reason the author has published this book.
