This book contains information and skill-building activities designed to train adolescents as peer facilitators. The first chapter describes peer facilitation and provides an overview of the book. The second chapter discusses principles, concepts, and ideas to help better understand how people learn, make decisions, change, and develop their own unique personalities. The third chapter describes the process of attentive listening. The fourth chapter discusses the skills and intuitive elements needed for the facilitator to increase the chances that the helping conditions will be present and that the relationship will be beneficial. The fifth chapter describes a facilitative feedback model. The value of feedback, feedback as praise, feedback as confrontation, direct and indirect feedback, and using feedback in a group are discussed. The sixth chapter examines responsible decision-making. A five-step model is presented which can serve as a guide in decision-making. The seventh chapter addresses the evaluation process. Assessment of self and others is discussed as information needed to evaluate progress, make adjustments when necessary, give direction, and eventually help group members understand more about their work. The eighth chapter focuses on practical aspects of being a peer facilitator. Three peer facilitator roles are described, and possible work settings are described. The ninth chapter provides information for handling problem moments as a peer facilitator. (LLL)

Sharing is an important concept. Young children go through an egocentric stage, and it is very hard for them to grasp the concept of sharing their belongings with others. I wrote this book because my daughter struggles with sharing. Each day when I have the opportunity to impart good values and morals, I employ the Golden Rule for assistance: Treat others like you would want them to treat you. Sharing is truly a way to show others that you care and love them.

Decades of research have demonstrated that the parent-child dyad and the environment of the familyâ€"which includes all primary caregiversâ€"are at the foundation of children's well-being and healthy development. From birth, children are learning and rely on parents and the other caregivers in their lives to protect and care for them. The impact of parents may never be greater than during the earliest years of life, when a child's brain is rapidly developing and when nearly all of her or his experiences are created and shaped by parents and the family environment. Parents help children build and refine their knowledge and skills, charting a trajectory for their health and well-being during childhood and beyond. The experience of parenting also impacts parents themselves. For instance, parenting can enrich and give focus to parents' lives; generate stress or calm; and create any number of emotions, including feelings of happiness, sadness, fulfillment, and anger. Parenting of young children today takes place in the context of significant ongoing developments. These include: a rapidly growing body of science on early childhood, increases in funding for programs and services for families, changing demographics of the U.S. population, and greater diversity of family structure. Additionally, parenting is increasingly being shaped by technology and increased access to information about parenting. Parenting Matters identifies parenting knowledge, attitudes, and practices associated with positive developmental outcomes in children ages 0-8; universal/preventive and targeted strategies used in a variety of settings that have been effective with parents of young children and that support the identified knowledge, attitudes, and practices; and barriers to and facilitators for parents' use of practices that lead to healthy child outcomes as well as their participation in effective programs and services. This report makes recommendations directed at an array of stakeholders, for promoting the wide-scale adoption of effective programs and services for parents and on areas that warrant further research to inform policy and practice. It is meant to serve as a roadmap for the future of parenting policy, research, and practice in the United States.

This is one of the six levels of the "SPIRIT" program we use to teach children how to become well rounded individuals. Reaching inside of themselves, finding Strength they did not know they had. Perseverance through adversity, Intelligence through study and practice, Responsibility for their own actions, Integrity to become a well-rounded whole individual and Talent to be whatever they decide to be in life both mentally and physically.

If you bought this book thinking you would read a series of humorous vignettes, guess again. This book is about Life, real life, not those fairy tales our mothers share with us as we grow up. Mommy wants her children happy and visited by Mickey Mouse, not those caped in evil. However, boys and girls, Mickey Mouse only lives in Disney, and we must be prepared for the Big Bad Wolf, who lives in the real world, and all of his huffing and puffing. Hopefully after reading this you will fortify your house with Craig Brand's advice and hard learned experiences. This book is about survival in today's world. A rule book, so to speak, about living, and a must read. Craig Brand provides his audience with not only a strong dose of reality, but offers positive solutions to surviving the reality we must all endure; called "Life". You will read this book from cover to cover and then do it again; hopefully re-purchasing the book as you re-read it. Yeah, Yeah, but that's Life! Craig Brand doesn't hold back his thoughts, comments and concerns regarding our survival while living, existing and just trying to get by in this world we were all born into. He doesn't discriminate as he drags the good, the bad and the ugly through the mud. Have you wondered why bad things are happening to you; well, read this book and not only will you understand why, but know what to do about it and be assured that survival is not just limited to you. Staying thoroughly entertained, the reader shall gain a new perspective on Life, and our reason to keep on living or not! "This book captures what everyone thinks, truly knows, but doesn't want to say. It is brilliantly put together in a way that life's realities make you want to cry or laugh or both." —M. Norman Pardo, Managing Member of TCI Films, LLC

Learning good social behaviors is vital to a child's development, and sharing is one of the first social skills every child must learn. That might mean sharing a toy with a playmate, a snack with a parent, or even a room with a sibling. These are early opportunities to teach your little ones the power of sharing. Join Princess Penelope and her unicorn Aurora in Sharing: Princess and Unicorn Stories. The story takes place in the Land of Wisteria. When Penelope's friends Owen and Bella come to visit, she has something magical to show them. But even though these best friends love and respect each other, mishaps do happen. As always, they solve their problems by remembering to be polite, kind, and caring as their day of play turns into a day of learning. The father-daughter duo of J.S. Jen and Penny B. Jen write in a whimsical fashion educating while entertaining your children. "Penelope shows her friends what is hidden: A MAGICAL WAND, decorated with a kitten. The wand makes animal shapes of all different types. Animals made from stone, wood, ice and even bright lights."

This charming colour-illustrated book introduces young readers to the joys and responsibilities of taking turns and sharing. When Queenie, a playful dog, arrives at their household, Mia and her younger brother, Adam, embark on an adventure filled with humour, warmth, and lessons learned.

A play date with friends is in danger of getting a little off track until the parent's use this moment as a teaching moment in the importance of sharing and being mindful of the feelings of others.

Human greed and irresponsible use of natural resources is putting a strain on Mother Nature and humanity. Never has this been more apparent than in recent times. From wild fires in California to bleaching of coral reefs in Australia, the devastation caused by mankind is widespread. The destruction of natural habitats ultimately impacts our wellbeing as seen from the ravages of the novel Coronavirus. There is an urgent need to inculcate, in our younger generation, the values of empathy, kindness, courage, self-awareness and respect for the natural world. Parents need to get this right starting TODAY. Told through the eyes of a 6-year-old, the first book in "A Beautiful World" series contains short stories with simple illustrations on how sharing and caring can create a truly beautiful world.

Learning to get along with others is a key skill for starting school and 'Sharing Is Caring' is the perfect way to open up a discussion with your child about friendship. Funny, friendly characters, Bip, Bop, and Boo star in a simple story about caring for others, and sharing so they play better together. Use this fun, 'learn to read' book to practice reading skills and build reading word vocabulary. Visit a host of fun and familiar Penelope Dyan characters and think about what it means to care and to share! Sharing is a social skill all children need to learn—the sooner the better. Concrete examples and reinforcing illustrations help children practice sharing, understand how and why to share, and realize the benefits of sharing. Includes a note to teachers and parents, additional information for adults, and activities.

Drawing from hundreds of studies in half a dozen fields, The Brighter Side of Human Nature makes a powerful case that caring and generosity are just as natural as selfishness and aggression. This lively refutation of cynical assumptions about our species considers the nature of empathy and the causes of war, why we (incorrectly) explain all behavior in terms of self-interest, and how we can teach children to care.
