Description Do you want to know how to understand and influence people with mental control, nlp and emotional intelligence? Are you ready to learn the secrets of human mind and take control in personal relationships? If yes, then keep reading... Consider a time where someone made you feel guilty. Perhaps you told your partner that you were tired, but you got called into work and cannot possibly go on that elaborate anniversary date night that you two had planned for weeks. You work a job where you are crucial, and they cannot easily replace you, and you feel like you have no choice but to go in. Your partner, instead of being understanding about the predicament, looks at you and sadly sighs, saying, "You know, I was really, really looking forward to our date. It's already paid for and non-refundable, and I can't believe that you would have to work on our anniversary when you requested it off two months ago." Your partner sighs again and slowly and sadly starts to take off shoes and coat. You are left feeling incredibly guilty as you walk out the door, but you have no choice. You were just the victim of an attempt to guilt-trip you into refusing to go to work that day. Guilt-tripping is a commonly used form of manipulation, especially when people want to make someone else feel bad. They will say things that lead the other person to feel guilty about having to refuse to do something, no matter how reasonable that refusal may have been, in an attempt to force the other person's hand. This is more or less what manipulation seeks to do-it is designed to make the other person feel guilty and less in control of the situation. Because guilt is a driving motivator for most people, that feeling of guilt is like a call to action—a warning that you are not fulfilling your obligations, and that can be enough for the manipulator to get the upper hand. In this book we will discuss the following topics: The pillars of manipulation Psychology of manipulation How manipulation works Manipulation through NLP Mind control and brainwashing Understand people using emotional intelligence Advanced manipulation methods: love bombing, foot-in-the-door, NLP mirroring Social manipulation strategies Improve relationship using manipulation How to recognize a manipulator How to overcome a manipulation Difference between hypnosis and manipulation The beauty of successfully analyzing others ...And more Manipulation is limited to instilling feelings of guilt—in fact; there are several other common, far more insidious ways to manipulate others in order to get what you want. You can literally control minds if you know how to do so and can get the right rapport. You can trigger people to do things that you never thought they would be willing to do. You can effectively influence people to do just about anything if you know what you are doing. Within this book, you will be given a guide to recognizing what manipulation is, why it occurs, and how. You will learn about persuasion, a secondary form of influence that focuses more on convincing the other person to obey rather than forcing their hand. You will be introduced to neuro-linguistic processing, another process that those who practice dark psychology tend to wield, and lastly, you will address how to improve your communication and NLP skills in ways that are conducive to living a successful, happy life. Greenhouse control system manufacturers produce equipment and software with hundreds of settings and, while they hold training courses on how to adjust these settings, there is as yet no integrated instruction on when or why. Despite rapid growth in the greenhouse industry, growers are still faced with a multitude of variables and no unifying framework from which to choose the best option. Consolidating 30 years of research in greenhouse climate control, Optimal Control of Greenhouse Cultivation utilizes mathematical models to incorporate the wealth of scientific knowledge into a feasible optimal control methodology for greenhouse crop cultivation. Discussing several different paradigms on greenhouse climate control, it integrates the current research into physical modeling of the greenhouse climate in response to heating, ventilation, and other control variables with the biological modeling of variables such as plant evapo-transpiration and growth. Key topics include state-space greenhouse and crop modeling needed for the design of integrated optimal controllers that exploit rather than mitigate outside weather conditions, especially sunlight, given widely different time scales. The book reviews classical rule-based and multivariable feedback controllers in comparison with the optimal hierarchical control paradigm. It considers real and hypothetical examples including lettuce, tomato, and solar greenhouses and examines experimental results of greenhouse climate control using optimal control software. The book concludes with a discussion of open issues as well as future perspectives and challenges. Providing a tool to automatically determine the most economical controls and settings for their operation, this much-needed book relieves growers of unnecessary control tasks, and allows them to achieve the best possible trade-off between short term savings and optimal harvest yield.
