This book tells the story of children climbing trees. It describes the excitement of the children when they first climbed the tree, the rich imagination on the tree, the fear when climbing the tree, and the little sister guiding them to climb down the tree. It not only shows the children's innocence and rich imagination, but also subtly warns young readers that it is not safe to climb trees. In addition, the vivid depiction of the little sister shows the kindness and mischief of the child. The main color of the whole picture is green, and the story is easy to understand and has educational significance.

Wanting children to have fun and being afraid of quarreling their neighbors is a common trouble for many urban families. Respect for others. First of all, we must understand each other's mood to create a win-win situation! Boom boom boom boom! Where is this loud noise coming from? It turned out that the older brother and younger brother were playing Superman!

They ran around the house, jumped up and down, and had a lot of fun. As a result, the neighbor's grandpa downstairs came up and rang the doorbell, Ding Dong! Ding Dong! Grandpa asked, Little friend, is there an elephant here? The boys bowed their heads embarrassedly. Soon after, the elder brother and younger brother started to race again. Who ran fast, they ignored their mother's warning.
